The magazine's "Teens & Parents" survey shows that today's generation of most young people generally get (angry - along - disappointed) with their parents, feel that they understand them, and they believe their parents consider family as the number 1 priority in their lives. That's why they appreciate the way they're being (brought up - bringing up - upbringing).

(Although - Unless - Instead) more than a third of teens have something in their rooms they would like to keep secret from their parents, it is usually nothing more harmful than a diary or a CD.

Despite this, parents (worry - hope - suggest) that their own kids might get out of control and become unruly once they reach the teenage years . However, the facts in the survey should make us feel better. The survey shows us that today's teens are loving and sensible.

They are certainly (happy – happier – the happiest) than the angry people in the teenage stereotypes we all know about. Most teens believe they must be understanding about differences among individuals. Many of them volunteer for community service with disadvantaged people. When they talk about themselves, their friends and their families, they sound positive and (annoyed – desperate – proud). Generally, these are very nice kids.

According to recent studies, men are shouldering more of the domestic burden and spending more time parenting than any before them. Although the numbers are still relatively small, the number of fathers which is about 154,000, according to the 2010 Census , is on the rise. In short, men are acting more like moms. Isn't this what we've been waiting for?

Take Lauren, a high-powered magazine editor who works upwards of 80 hours a week her husband stays home with their daughter. After realizing they were spending much of their already-scarce alone time over dirty dishes in the sink or piles of unwashed laundry, Lauren hired a maid, though finances were already tight. "I felt it was almost necessary to save our marriage, or at least to restore some sanity," she said. "After a long day at my work place, I always felt I hated coming home to a big mess and a crying child, and he hated that I expected him to be of all of it just because he's there all the time. Though I did."

3° Supply the right tense or form of the bracketed words (3.5 mks) :

Safe interactions between kids and dogs are what every (showing love to dog) parent wants. You may know all about dog bite (prevent) You know better than to leave young children and dogs alone together. You have probably even child-proofed your dog. But have you trained your children too? Every child should learn how to act around dogs, even if you do not have a dog at home. Many children are naturally drawn to dogs. Unfortunately, without the proper tools, kids may not know how to properly behave in order to keep themselves safe.

Never approach a dog that appears (anxiety), stressed or fearful without permission. Do not run towards a dog. If you are allowed (go) meet a dog, approach slowly.

Never approach a dog when he (eat) Avoid getting close to a dog that is chewing on a treat or toy. Try not to approach sleeping dogs. If soft petting/scratching of the chin/chest is tolerated, you can (gentle) pet or scratch the neck and back. Avoid hugging dogs.

This makes many dogs (not comfortable) If the dog comes towards you, try very hard not to scream or run. Instead, act like a tree: stand still, remain calm.
